Consumer Member to be Added to Psychology Board

New Legislation Brings Change to State Boards

In his effort that has been ongoing for three years, Senator Fred Mills’ measure was signed into law as Act 515, requiring boards such as the state psychology board to make several changes, including adding a consumer member.

Act 515 transfers the healthcare professional licensing agencies, boards, commissions, and like entities to the La. Department of Health (LDH) and deletes repealed and obsolete citations and references.

The new law adds at least one consumer member to each healthcare professional licensing board that did not previously have one and provides standardized amendment.

Focus is on Prevention as Suicide Continues to Rise

One of the measures that flew through the House (85 to 0) and then with amendments, through the Senate (32 to 0), in the regular 2018 Legislative session, was Representative Reid Falconer’s “Louisiana Suicide Prevention Act.”

An ambitious plan, Act 450 directs the Office of Behavioral Health to ensure that administrators of all healthcare facilities licensed by state and all licensed healthcare professionals have access to informational resources and technical assistance necessary for implementation of the zero suicide initiative. The initiative carried a price tag of nearly $800,000. Because of the state’s financial picture, an amendment was added requiring that implementation had to be contingent on obtaining grant money.

The authors of Act 450 note that according to the 2016 America’s Health Rankings report, the number of deaths due to suicide per one hundred thousand people in the United States rose steadily from 2012 through 2016, and Louisiana’s rate of deaths from suicide is nearly ten percent higher than the national average.

The Center for Disease Control continues to rank suicide as the 10th leading cause of death in the US. The most recent year of data (2015) placed suicide deaths at 44,193, nationwide, more than the number killed in automobile accidents, which was 37,757, or homicides, 17,793, for that same year.
Archimedes and I are waiting for a friend to die.

The friend, Walter, is Archimedes’ swim-team comrade and coffee drinking buddy. The two of them have been friends and hanging out together for 15 years, two or three mornings a week after the masters swimmers finish their laps at the local university pool.

A few months ago Walter went in for some minor surgery and came out of the hospital with MRSA, one of those horrible superbugs being cultivated in hospitals these days. The physicians have tried to beat it down over the last months, but have been unsuccessful. Barring a miracle, Walter will be dying of the hospital-bred infection soon.

The third reason for death in the U.S. is unintended outcomes of medical treatment.

A study by Martin Makary, MD, a professor of surgery at Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, found that medical errors—unintended acts, omissions, commissions, failures to achieve the desired outcomes that are unrelated to the original illness or injury—comprise the third leading cause of death in the U.S. This amounts to 251,000 deaths nationwide, surpassed only by heart disease and cancer.

“It boils down to people dying from the care that they receive rather than the disease for which they are seeking care,” Makary said to The Washington Post.

And guess what? Medical error is not included on death certificates or in rankings, Makary noted. Whistleblower Makary authored Unaccountable: What Hospitals Won’t Tell You and How Transparency Can Revolutionize Health Care.

We already know this issue from all types of examples: When the specialists go on vacation the mortality drops; for the one out of 1,000 women saved by mammography, two to 10 healthy women will be treated needlessly and 250 to 500 will get a false alarm and half of those biopsied needlessly; a third of FDA approved drugs have been found to later have safety issues.

The United States is the sickest of all the wealthy countries. Bloomberg reported that the United States ranks 50th out of 55 countries, dubbing the U.S. the “least-efficient” health-care system in the world.

In a comparison of age-adjusted deaths from all causes, the World Health Organization ranks the United States last in similar countries. And, Louisiana ranks 50 of all the states, according to the Louisiana Department of Health.

“Health is a misnomer, because most activity involves illness. Health care and medical care are not synonymous,” said authors of “The Anatomy of Health Care in the United States” in November 2013, JAMA.

While medical costs are driven by chronic disease, it is not due to an aging population, an often cited cause. The JAMA authors show that about 80 percent of the total health care cost is accounted for by those under 65.

“Prevention,” they say, “requires tools that are often unfamiliar because educational, behavioral, and social interventions, not usually considered to be part of medicine, may be most effective for many diseases.”

So we psychologists (and a whole lot of other people) know all this. But changing a system from inside is nearly impossible. Even so, that is where psychology usually finds itself—inside the medical, big pharma, or governmental systems. Not a good place to try and intervene in an on-going process/social system.

Where do we start? Trained psychologists have some pretty powerful tools at our disposal. I especially like Scott Lilienfeld’s words: “…trained psychologists are virtually unparalleled among rival professions in one crucial respect: our ability to apply scientific reasoning and rigorous methodology to assessing, evaluating, and alleviating human problems, …”

So here’s my short list:

1) Define our job as scientist-practitioners who solve complex, multiple-level, social and behavioral problems. Know what we’re about and not about. Stop trying to do the job beneath us or someone else’s job. Tell the scientific truth. Sometimes we might have to play the child in the Emperor’s New Clothes fable.

2) Reconnect our practice with our science and bite the bullet to police ourselves and make sure our competence is up to snuff. Our mean competence level (group competence) must fall at a level that predicts good outcomes in our patients/customers. Measure everything. Separate science from politics.

3) Work on branding—Step up to the mic, write that book, consult with that policy-maker. Communicate the vision and solutions.

Have a wonderful July 4th holiday.

Every day is precious.

Budget continued

The new tax will raise an estimated $463 million to plug holes in the budget that if left unresolved, had threatened to bring dramatic cuts in health care services and what the Governor called “a catastrophic cut” to higher education.

The new sales tax, a partial renewal of an expiring one percent sales tax, is said to give the lawmakers some respite from the yearly battles with the budget. The .45 brings the state sales tax to 4.45.

“The fiscal cliff is now gone and we have predictability ahead of us,” the Governor said after the agreement passed in this year’s third special session.

In the special sessions lawmakers were attempting to deal with the state’s budget crisis when more than $1 billion in taxes would expire on June 30, 2018. The two earlier special sessions floundered after the House repeatedly rejected increased taxes. The House passed a budget that made dramatic cuts to TOPs, universities and state agencies, and then that was vetoed by the Governor.

Allowing the new arrangements, this week Moody’s Investors Service changed Louisiana’s rating to “stable.”

“Thanks to the bipartisan compromise achieved during the last special session, Louisiana is no longer on the negative watch list. By working together, for the first time in a long time, Louisiana’s budget will have the kind of stability and predictability we need to bring new business opportunities to our state and grow our economy. As a result, not only are the credit rating agencies taking notice, but we are positioned to generate greater savings for our state that will enable us to continue on our path toward prosperity.”

Fanning and Cathey Reappointed by Governor

On June 1, the Governor reappointed John T. Fanning, Ph.D., of Jefferson, to the Traumatic Head and Spinal Cord Injury Trust Fund Advisory Board. Fanning is a clinical neuropsychologist in private practice. The Traumatic Head and Spinal Cord Injury Trust Fund Advisory Board provides services in a flexible, individualized manner to Louisiana citizens with traumatic head or traumatic spinal cord injuries. The board administers a program which enables individuals to return to a reasonable level of functioning and independent living in their communities.

On June 27, the Governor reappointed Ronald D. Cathey, of Simsboro, to the Louisiana Licensed Professional Counselors Board of Examiners.

Gov. Edwards Announces Initial Results of State’s Criminal Justice Reform Efforts

In a June Press release the Governor announced, “Louisiana recently hit an important milestone: we no longer have the highest imprisonment rate in the nation,” said Gov. Edwards. “In addition, the reform measures now in place have resulted in fewer prison admissions for drug crimes, smaller probation and parole caseloads and enhanced training for officers, and millions of dollars in savings are now available for reinvestment in community programs designed to help offenders who have served their time learn a different way of life, one that will enable them to become productive members of society. While these results are early, they are promising and should give everyone hope that we are reforming our criminal justice system for the better when it comes to our citizens, communities and state.”

The Governor was joined by Dept. of Corrections Sec. Jimmy LeBlanc, West Baton Rouge Parish Sheriff Mike Cazes and Judge Rusty Knight of the Justice Reinvestment Initiative Oversight Council.

The first annual JRI Performance Report released by the Department of Corrections (DOC) and the Louisiana Commission on Law Enforcement (LCLE), demonstrates that the state is making progress toward reaching these goals.

The state is imprisoning fewer nonviolent offenders in costly prison beds: according to the preliminary data the prison population has declined by 7.6% as of March 31, driven by a reduction in the number of people imprisoned for nonviolent offenses, which dropped by 20 percent, according to the announcement.

The state is also increasing the use of alternatives to incarceration for less serious offenses: admissions to prison for drug offenses decreased by 3%, while probation intakes for this same group increased 13%.

Reducing sentence lengths for drug and property crimes (which have decreased by 10% and 4%, respectively) allowing the state to focus prison resources on violent offenders. “We are pleased with the direction Louisiana is headed,” said Sec. LeBlanc. “We’re thankful for the Governor’s leadership and commitment to changing what wasn’t working in Louisiana. While we are excited by the changes we are seeing, and the improvements, we understand the work is far from over. In fact, it has just begun.”

The report also notes that Louisiana is improving the effectiveness of community supervision by focusing on the first months of supervision, when people are at the greatest risk of reoffending, and giving probation and parole staff new tools for incentivizing compliance with supervision conditions. As a result, the most current data shows the community supervision population has dropped by eight (8) percent and the caseload has dropped from 143 to 129.

Numerous initiatives are helping the state clear away barriers to successful re-entry: the Louisiana Prisoner Reentry Initiative continues to aim at cutting the recidivism rate of the state’s higher-risk returning citizens by half, and Louisiana residents who have criminal convictions now face fewer barriers to obtaining occupational licenses because of the reform legislation.

Eligibility criteria for such consumer members.

The new law also requires the governor to ensure that his appointments to healthcare professional licensing boards demonstrate diversity with respect to race, gender, ethnicity, and geography.

New law also authorizes all licensing boards and commissions created and provided for in prior law to develop a process to issue a license, permit, or certificate outside the national examination for those individuals with a disorder which is recognized by the Americans with Disabilities Act.

An effort to take professional associations out of the direct loop for board nominations was amended out of Senator Mills' measure.

Some of the intent by Senator Mills' efforts found its way to Act 623, the Occupational Board Compliance Act, authored by Representative Connick. The goal is to help boards use the least restrictive regulation necessary, in regard to market competition and other factors, in their efforts to protect consumers from present, significant, and substantiated harms that threaten public health and safety.

Act 623 creates the Occupational Licensing Review Commission, comprised of the governor, secretary of state, commissioner of agriculture, commissioner of insurance, and the state treasurer, or their respective designees, who are responsible for active supervision of state executive branch occupational licensing boards.

In a related measure, Act 655 allows that a person who has a disciplinary action brought against him or her by the La. State Bd. of Dentistry or the La. Auctioneers Licensing Bd. to elect to have the matter moved to the division of administrative law for a disciplinary adjudication by an administrative law judge. The measure also directs boards to develop process for different exams for those with disabilities, and submit quarterly reports to the legislative oversight committee about complaints regarding board actions.

Medical Board Back Under Knife

The state medical board once again found itself in the hot seat over its investigatory processes, with Act 599 being passed into law in the 2018 Regular Session.

The new law stipulates that the duration of any preliminary review of a licensee initiated in accordance with proposed law shall be no greater than 90 days unless extended by the board. The board, in conducting such a preliminary review, may obtain all files and records related to the complaint and to the complainant, and may obtain no more than 20 additional files or records in connection with the review unless authorized by the board.

Act 599 requires that prior to the board conducting any site visit or requesting medical records from an individual licensed by the board who is not subject to an active investigation, the executive director of the board shall request approval of the board through a duly adopted motion by two-thirds vote of the board, meeting in executive session, to conduct the site visit or records request.

And the law requires that prior to offering a consent order to a person licensed by the board, the board shall make available to the person all files and records which pertain to the case against him before the board, and which are not required by law to remain confidential or which are not otherwise privileged.

Proposed law requires that prior to offering a consent order to a person the board shall make available to the person all files and records which pertain to the case against him before the board, and which are not required by law to remain confidential or which are not otherwise privileged.

This is not the first pass for the Medical Board. They have been in front of the legislators several times now, beginning in 2015 when the Louisiana Medical Society worked to make key changes in the way the state medical board manages investigations, pushing for the Rules changes, including a limit on preliminary investigations to one, rather than three years.

Government affairs consultant and spokesperson for the Louisiana State Medical Society, Ms. Jennifer Marusak explained to the Times that the need for major changes came after years of complaints about how physicians were treated by the investigations staff at the state medical board.

“There were no limits, no structures, no definitions,” Marusak said. “A complaint of having a poor bedside manner could open up the door so that the investigators could go in and investigate everything in that physician’s office.”

Act 696 Allows Behavioral Health Providers to See Clients at School

Act 696 by Representative Pierre, allows a behavioral health provider to provide behavioral health services to a student at school during school hours if requested by the student’s parent or legal guardian.

The Act defines “Behavioral health provider” as a provider who is licensed by the Louisiana Department of Health or a health profession licensing board including but not limited to a psychiatrist, psychologist, medical psychologist, licensed specialist in school psychology, marriage and family therapist, professional counselor, clinical social worker, or a behavioral health provider organization licensed to provide behavioral health services in Louisiana.

According to the digest of the bill, services include individual psychotherapy, family psychotherapy, psychotropic medication management, community psychiatric support and treatment, and crisis intervention. Also, “Evaluator” shall mean a licensed psychiatrist, psychologist, medical psychologist, licensed specialist in school psychology, professional counselor, marriage and family therapist, or clinical social worker who is certified by the respective board of examiners in Louisiana to provide necessary evaluations and who is not an employee of the public school governing authority or the state Department of Education.

Behavioral health services shall be permitted during school hours if the student’s parent or legal guardian presents a behavioral health evaluation performed by an evaluator chosen by the parent or legal guardian and the evaluation indicates that the services are necessary during school hours to assist the student with behavioral health impairments that the evaluator determines are interfering with the student’s ability to thrive in the educational setting.

The Act says that a behavioral health evaluation presented by the parent or legal guardian of a student shall not be construed as an independent educational evaluation for purposes of determining if a student meets the criteria established for eligibility for special education and related services.

The cost of all behavioral health services provided to a student shall be the sole responsibility of the parent or legal guardian. The parent or legal guardian of a student receiving services from a behavioral service provider shall be required to execute a “consent to release information form” between the provider and the public school governing authority. And a public school governing authority shall not enter into a contract or an exclusive agreement with a behavioral health provider that prohibits the parent or legal guardian from choosing the behavioral health provider for the student.

Online Reporting of Child Abuse Set Forth in Rep. Chaney’s Act 207

Act 207 by Representative Chaney amends the Children’s Code so to provide for additional means by which permitted and mandatory reporters may report suspected cases of child abuse and neglect to the Department of Children and Family Services.

Present law provides that permitted reporters of suspected child abuse or neglect shall report such cases by phone through the Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS) designated child protection reporting hotline. The new law adds reporting in person at any DCFS child welfare office as a means for permitted reporters to report suspected cases of child abuse or neglect.

The new law provides that mandatory reporters of suspected child abuse or neglect shall report such cases through the DCFS designated child protection reporting hotline, via the DCFS Mandated Reporter Portal online, or in person at any child welfare office.

The new law stipulates that making a report of suspected child abuse or neglect to DCFS by facsimile does not relieve the reporter of his duty to report in accordance with present law and proposed law.

Present law provides that if a mandatory reporter’s initial report of suspected child abuse or neglect was in oral form, then it shall be followed by a written report made within five days to the local child protection unit of DCFS. The new law revises present law to provide that if a mandatory reporter’s initial report was in oral form, then it shall be followed by a written report made within five days via the online DCFS Mandated Reporter Portal or by mail to the DCFS centralized intake unit.

Act 498 Sets Up Change in State’s Abortion Law

Senator John Milkovich’s SB 181 will make it unlawful for a physician to perform an abortion after 15 weeks gestational age.

According to the text, the new law will become effective upon final decision of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit upholding the Act that originated as House Bill 1510 of the 2018 Regular Session of the Mississippi Legislature, which decision would thereby provide the authority for a state within the jurisdiction of that court of appeals to restrict abortion past 15 weeks of gestational age.

New law provides that certain provisions are repealed in favor of the provisions of R.S. 40:1061 (health provisions: abortion), immediately upon and to the extent that the U.S. Supreme Court upholds the authority of states to prohibit elective abortions on demand or by the adoption of an amendment to the U.S. Constitution that would restore the state’s authority to prohibit elective abortions.

The new law retains prior law stating that it is not unlawful for a physician to perform an abortion if physician terminates the pregnancy in order to preserve the life or health of the unborn male fetus.

Dr. Boggs reported that she shared the previously discussed position of the Board as not being in favor of the Psypact due to concerns that the La. Attorney General issued an opinion that compacts were not constitutional, that the LSBEP could not delegate authority to ASPPB, and that it would put additional requirements on states to regulate the actions of out-of-state psychologists without additional funding.

For the fourth time in five years, The Psychology Times swept 1st, 2nd, and 3rd place awards in its Division, for Best Investigative Reporting, announced at the awards ceremony of the joint Louisiana and Mississippi Press Convention held June 14-16 in New Orleans.

The Times also earned the prestigious Gibbs Adams Award, a special honor given to investigative reporters. The award is named in memory of legendary State Times-Morning Advocate investigative reporter Gibbs Adams.

The Times was named first place in Best Website, a joint effort by Times technical consultant, Ms. Susan Brown, video designer Jake Nelson-Dooley, and columnists Dr. Alvin Burstein and Dr. Susan Andrews. Dr. Burstein writes the movie review column, Shrink at the Flicks, and Dr. Andrews writes Stress Solutions.

The Times also won second in Best Special Section, for its Year-in-Review Community Awards for 2017.

The Louisiana Press Association, undergoing cutbacks, reduced divisions and categories. No awards were given for Best News Coverage, Continuing Coverage, Community Service, or Editorial Cartoon, or others.

The Advocate (Baton Rouge), the Daily Comet (Thibodaux), The Livingston Parish News (Denham Springs), and The St. Charles Herald-Guide (Boutte) earned Newspaper of the Year honors in their respective divisions. The Advocate was named this year’s Louisiana Press Association Freedom of Information Award.

The coveted Freedom of Information award originally came from an idea that Gordon Nelson, long-time member of the Press Association and publisher of the Coushatta Citizen, and Bob Holean, current Psychology Times journalism consultant, presented to the Louisiana Press Association in the 1980s.

The late Gordon and Lynn Nelson owned and operated the Coushatta Citizen, and are parents of Julie Nelson. The Citizen won the first Freedom of Information (FOI) award more than three decades ago.

The Times received word just before press time, that Dr. Fred E. Davis passed away on June 30, 2018. He was age 80. He was a cherished colleague to many in the state but primarily to those in the New Orleans area.

Dr. Davis had served as director of the Tulane University counseling center for a decade and after that was in private practice in New Orleans and also served as a professor on the faculty of the Tulane School of Social Work. Dr. Davis also served on the Louisiana State Board of Examiners of Psychologists.

He was a long standing member of the Louisiana Psychological Association and served on the continuing education committee.

Representative Falconer wrote “While suicide occurs among persons of all ages, ethnic backgrounds, and income levels, it is an especially troubling problem among youth in Louisiana, with suicide ranking as the second-leading cause of death in this state for persons between the ages of ten and twenty-four in 2014, the most recent year for which complete data are available.”

Suicide is a pronounced public health concern among military veterans nationwide and in Louisiana particularly, as Louisiana’s veteran suicide rate is over ten percent higher than that of the nation and of the southern region, write the authors. And, more than half of the people who died by suicide did not have unknown mental health condition, reports the CDC.

The rising rates of suicide has been at the front of the news for some psychologists in the field, and motivated the Louisiana Psychological Association to host suicide prevention expert Dr. April Foreman at their recent state convention.

Foreman is a licensed psychologist serving Veterans as Suicide Prevention Coordinator for Southeast Louisiana Veterans Health Care System. She also serves as Suicide Prevention Lead for Veterans Integrated Service Network 16, a region of Veterans Affairs. She is on the Executive Committee for the Board of the American Association of Suicidology.

Dr. Foreman presented “Suicide Risk Assessment,” at the Louisiana Psychological Association Convention recently, providing an overview of basics of suicide risk assessment, risk levels, and acute vs. chronic risk. She covered the use of safety planning as a follow up to risk assessment, current research innovations pertaining assessment of risk and actual prediction of suicide attempts/deaths, and possible ways this may impact clinical work in the upcoming years.

Dr. Foreman has been working toward this goal for some time. In 2014, Foreman supported Senator Ben Nevers’ effort to ensure that mental health professionals were adequately trained, SB 539. While the mandate was removed, the effort drew attention to the problem.

“This is a public health issue that is squarely in psychology’s wheelhouse,” said Foreman in a previous interview. “Only 9 to 10 percent of mental health professionals can pass a competency exam,” said Foreman. “This is a big training deficit.”

Dr. William “Bill” Schmitz, Jr., a licensed clinical psychologist in Baton Rouge, working primarily with the nation’s veterans, and who has served as President of the American Association for Suicidology previously explained the importance. “It is the number one emergency in mental health and the most lethal situation a professional will encounter. But, no one is required to have training,” he said.

Schmitz co-authored a white paper, “Preventing Suicide through Improved Training in Suicide Risk Assessment and Care,” a report of the American Association of Suicidology Task Force, which Schmitz chaired. In the report, authors noted that training for suicide prevention is inconsistent at best. The majority of mental health professionals receive very little, if any formal training in suicide prevention. The exceptions are the psychiatrists; 94 percent have received some training. However, even in this group, only about a quarter of these receive skill development training.

“An hour of didactic training may increase knowledge,” Schmitz explained to the Times, “but it doesn’t do anything to actually change competency.”

Dr. Foreman has also looked carefully into the competency problem. “When the state of Georgia was asking these same questions in 2005,” she said, “they assessed a sample of mental health professionals, and the competency rate was 9 percent. A few hours of training raised the rate to 83 percent,” she said. “That’s a huge difference.”

The rising rates of suicide are a concern. “There are several theories regarding this trend, though a specific and definitive explanation has not emerged,” Schmitz noted. “We do know that suicide attempts, across the lifespan, tend to become more lethal,” explaining that the ratio of suicide attempts to death is 100-200 to one for adolescents and young adults, but for those over 65 the ratio is four to one.

“Coupled with this,” Schmitz said, “I would also add that help-seeking and mental health treatment remain very stigmatized among the older adult populations. There is lingering doubt and fears associated with institutionalization, asylums, and being ‘locked up’ if one divulges any thought of suicide,” he explained. “This is very disconcerting given the clear evidence that even people determined to be at high risk for suicide have been shown to respond to intensive outpatient therapy.

In a previous interview with the Times, Dr. Frank Campbell, a clinical social worker and expert from Lacombe, Louisiana, former Executive Director of the Baton Rouge Crisis Intervention Center, and also Past-President of and American Association for Suicidology, said, “It is important to accept that suicide is a very complex and paradoxical cause of death to develop clear understandings from. It is an N of 1 and by that I mean each suicide is unique.” Dr. Campbell’s work has been featured in a documentary for the Discovery Channel.

“For me the most comprehensive micro or individual answer to any death by suicide,” he said, “is that it happens as a result of a self-defined crisis where the individual’s ability to cope with the precipitating event which brings on the crisis response—decline in coping and possible increase in maladaptive coping—was unable to keep that person safe from suicide,” Dr. Campbell said.

“Data is helpful in awareness but each death impacts the community in ways that are unique and little research has been conducted on the impact suicide has on generating additional causalities both in the short term or long term for a community.”

“The macro response would include considering the impact of social and economic changes in the past 10 years,” Campbell said, “because economic conditions have historically correlated with upward trends in suicide.”

Also, “… a growing number of citizens who are veterans of military service—mostly men—which are estimated to equal one out of each five deaths by suicide,” he said.

Dr. Schmitz pointed out that there is growing evidence supporting various approaches that help those at risk. “There are treatments that work, there are warning signs and basic skills of suicide assessment and management that should be core clinical competencies,” said Schmitz. “Unfortunately, the majority of mental health professionals do not obtain this training in either their graduate studies or continuing education,” he said.

“Providers that are not engaging their patients in active discussions about means restriction and crisis response planning really terrify me,” he said. Dr. Campbell said, “Managing transitions in life if not easy and when health and loneliness are isolating factors along breakdown geographically of the family and health care challenges it is a lot to manage. Generational expectations are not always shared or expressed clearly to family who might be wanting to help but just don’t know how.”

“My thought is that if we had the number of folks who die by suicide each year drowning then we would train more lifeguards to stand by those in the water.

“The river of suicide is large in this country and it is up to all of us in our communities to become trained as lifeguards. One such training that is for all care givers is the two-day ASIST (Applied Suicide Intervention Skills Training) that helps anyone help another at risk from the river to safety for now.”

Editors Note: For our July 4th holiday issue we decided to share again the photography of Dr. Tom Stigall. He has embraced photography in his retirement and he also served as the president of the Louisiana Photographic Society and a photographic artist. He has had work accepted for a national competition hosted at LSU. "My work is eclectic as to subject matter," he said. "It is the product of a desire to preserve images that will be experienced by the viewer as meaningful: esthetically pleasing, sympathetic and nurturing, awe-inspiring or arresting."

These delightful views of the LSU University Lakes and the interesting inhabitants in our state earned him and the Times a first place from the Louisiana Press Association for Best Photo Package in 2013.

Hereditary:
A Review
by Alvin G. Burstein, PhD

It may have been Stephen King—and who would be better qualified—who distinguished among terror, horror and shock. Stories evoking these strong unpleasant feelings, paradoxically, can find an avid audience, a fact on which King has capitalized. The distinction is that terror implies a sense of personal fearful involvement; horror is a more distant, almost pornographic, viewing of a fearful situation. Shock, in contrast, generates revulsion along with fear. Along those lines, last month’s review of A Quiet Place noted the terror it evoked. This month’s film, Hereditary, is a shocker.

In some ways the film seems a mix of Heironymous Bosch and Salvador Dali, giving us repugnant details woven into a surreal mesh that generates uncertainty about the nature of reality.

As the film’s title suggests, the tale is multi-generational, dealing with a quirky, just deceased grandmother at the time of her funeral, her troubled daughter, Annie, baffled son-in-law, Steve, and her two grandchildren, a pre-teen girl, Charlie and older grandson, Peter. It may be more of a teaser than a spoiler to point out that the grandchildren’s names are an allusion to the role that maleness will play in the movie’s denouement. That kind of allusiveness abounds in the film—for example, a scene of a walnuts being chopped for a dessert precedes, without explicit linkage, a later anaphylactic attack—contributing to the surreal quality.

The surreal quality emerges early in another way. Annie is an artist who creates tiny miniature rooms. As the film opens, she uses magnifying lenses and special tools to create a bedroom that morphs into Peter’s actual bedroom as his father, Steve, enters to rouse his son for the grandmother’s funeral. And then there are the use of peripheral events, things seen out of the corner of the eye—a figure floating in the corner of the room—or heard in the background—Charlie’s occasional tongue click.

At the funeral Annie describes her fraught relationship with her mother. At a grief group she attends later, she enlarges on the dysfunction of other family members, a schizophrenic brother who committed suicide and a depressed father who starved himself to death. These catastrophes are both a counterpoint to and a motivation for her creation of tiny, controlled simulacra of reality.

The psychoanalyst Adam Phillips sees the family as the place where one learns to deal with conflict. He has in mind the paradox of the family as a source of necessary grounding but, at the same time the font of inevitable conflicts of interests and ambivalences. That kind of drama is painfully expressed when Annie describes her guilt about her troubled past and when she reveals to Peter that she didn’t want to be a mother and had tried to abort his birth.

To detail the repugnant elements would take us into spoiler territory. But few early examples: Charlie beheads a bird. And she gets smeared with chocolate at a party that Peter takes her to.

And there are lots of insects.

I did not find Hereditary frightening. Like Bosch and Dali, it was disturbing in fascinating ways. It was a shocker. But I knew it wasn’t real—luckily.
